COMMISSION BIOLOGIST TO MAKE WATERFOWL STUDY

The Virginia Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries is sending C. S. Gilchrist, waterfowl and marsh specialist, to the United States Fish and Wildlife Service for a few weeks this summer to help make a study of ducks and geese on their nesting grounds in eastern and northern provinces of Canada.

Mr. Gilchrist will probably be assigned to Labrador where he will be engaged in tagging and nesting studies. According to I. T. Quinn, executive director of the Commission, all the states in the Atlantic flyway will supply game biologists to assist in this study. It is expected that this study will be influential in determining the number of days in the open season and the bag limits on waterfowl generally throughout the eastern United States.

NEW DORMITORIES AT LYNCHBURG COLLEGE NEARING COMPLETION

The new women's dormitory at Lynchburg College now nearing completion will be known as Hundley Hall, honoring Dr. and Mrs. J. T. T. Hundley who led the college through some of its most critical years, President Orville W. Wake has announced.

The main classroom building known now only as "main building" or "administration building," will henceforth be Hopwood Hall in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Josephus Hopwood, founders of the college. Dr. Hopwood was president of the college when the building was erected in 1908.

In memorializing Dr. and Mrs. Hundley, the college formally pays tribute to the man who was called from the pastorate of a church in Norfolk to assume the presidency of what was then, in 1915, Virginia Christian College during the darkest years of its history. In spite of difficulties, he brought the college to full accreditation, led in the development of buildings and grounds and secured support of the young institution. During his administration, which ended in 1936 with his retirement, the name of the college was changed to Lynchburg College.

Father Darkleaf

By c. h. r.

We are proud of the fine circulation enjoyed by this newspaper, and proud that we mat laid out for us in many homes. And we have a thrill that is enjoyed by editors of a metropolitan daily. That is that personal friendship with many of the subscribers. Often we are stopped when down town by a subscriber who asks us, right off, "Say Editor Robinson, when does my subscription run out?" They think we don't carry the expiration dates of nearly 1,500 subscriptions in mind! Or that the editor of The New York Times or Chicago Tribune has had that experience! And, you know something: it is not a rare thing for us to come up with the answer. Many have been taking this paper 20, 30, 40 or fifty years, paying a fee for most of our 62 years of publishing, and after years of experience we just know that John Smith is on June 25 to renew. And Mother Brightleaf, often I return to the office and hand her $2.00 and say, "Mrs. Doe wants to renew his subscription," and she comes right back with, "Yes, his paper ran out in July."

Speaking through our files, we came across an item that E. LeRoy Robinson became postmaster at Appomattox on June 1, 1934. And Mrs. [illegible] became chief clerk at the office July 1, 1934. So it is time to note two decades of service by two efficient postal employees.

We learn with deep regret that our plans to move the district conservation office from Appomattox to Chase City. The presence of the office here for many years has been an asset to the community, and we see no reason whatsoever for moving it.

We also regret to hear that our friends at Pamplin are not doing well in the Patrick Henry League. Latest report we had showed Pamplin had won one and lost eleven in league play. Amherst, Gretna and Charlotte Court House seemed to be fighting for the cellar positions in the league.

What is this: "bad news week"? A large complaints that sand is being taken from what is left of the beach at Holiday Lake.

Some people have leaned to the view that General George Marshall, the Secretary of State and aiding the last Administration's foreign policy, misjudged the situation in China. We never accepted that view. We believe, instead that Gen. Marshall is and is one of our greatest statesmen and Americans. Consider this: In 1947, Marshall went to Asia and on his way home he stopped in London. It was there that he said: "We are in the middle of a world revolution—and I don't mean Communism." It was instead, he said, a revolution "of the little people all over the world" who were beginning to learn what there is in life and to learn what they are missing. The result, Gen. Marshall said in effect, is like the way your surf riders here in Virginia Beach do it: they're just moving in on the crest of a wave." That was in 1947, and it seems to us to hit the nail right on the head.

A committee is usually made up of a few persons—one does the work, gets the moral support, and the rest talk. The story in to the news editor—Link.

Appomattox Ranks 7th In 1953 Rural Traffic Death Rate

Appomattox County moved from 30th to 7th position in the state last year in a ranking on rural traffic deaths. In 1952, Appomattox had 2 rural traffic deaths, and only one in 1953.

In a ranking by rate of traffic deaths per million miles of travel, Appomattox had a 2.8 percentage in 1953, compared with 6.0 in 1952.

Although final official tabulation of Virginia's 1953 traffic deaths stood at 904—56 le than the preceding year—Colonel C. W. Woodson, Jr., Superintendent of State Police and Executive Chairman of the Governor's Highway Safety Commitee, noted that no counties escaped highway death during the year but that among cities with populations of more than 10,000, Fredericksburg, Waynesboro and Winchester had perfect records. Winchester also had a perfect record in 1952.

Forty-four counties showed death increases while 43 bettered their previous records and 11 saw the same number of deaths as in 1952. Largest numbers of fatalities —44 —occurred in Fairfax, Caroline was second with 31 and Norfolk County third with 30.

On a basis of deaths per million miles traveled (death rate), Richmond County, with nine killed and a rate of 34.4, had the worst rate, while the best was established by New Kent with one death and a rate of 1.7. However, Colonel Woodson noted that when deaths are considered in a relatively small area, one multiple fatal accident can ruin the record. He noted that Warwick County is now a city and Elizabeth City was annexed by Hampton leaving 98 instead of 100 counties.

Substantial decreases were shown by Hanover (29—8), Bedford (18 —6), Princess Anne (31—20) and Norfolk County (40—30). On the other hand, deaths rose considerably in Caroline (23—31), Goochland (3—11), Nansemond (10—18) and Pittsylvania (12—20).

For cities above 50,000 population, Richmond led again with 24 and a death rate of 10.4, based on deaths per 100,000 population.

For the entire state, pedestrian deaths rose alarmingly from 201 to 225 but deaths of servicemen dropped from 127 to 96. Total accidents rose slightly from 58,852 to 59,433 and 785 of these killed one or more persons each. The latter was 35 less than last year. There were 24,733 people injured against 25,219 the preceding year and property and economic losses ran to nearly $90 million.

For the year, traffic volumes were about 8 per cent higher than in 1952.

The cannery will operate each week day after July 1, except on legal holidays.

Food Preservation School Scheduled at Rustburg

Instructors in vocational home economics and agriculture and cannery instructors of Appomattox and nearby counties will attend a food preservation working conference at Rustburg on June 29.

The purpose of the school, according to W. C. Dudley, Area Supervisor of Vocational Agriculture, is to bring to teachers information on latest developments in food preservation and make plans for the 1954 canning season which begins July 1.

Instructors for the one-day session, in addition to Mr. Dudley, will be F. C. Pennel of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and Dr. M. H. Sharpe of the V. P. I. Department of Vocational Education.

Despite a record-breaking drought the equivalent of over three million pints of food were conserved by more than thirty-three thousand farm people of Virginia who enrolled in community canneries last year.

A total of 824 people processed food and received instruction in the Appomattox school community cannery. This was the second high enrollment for any school cannery in Virginia. The amount of food conserved in the local cannery was exceeded by only nine schools.

To Measure Leaf Acreage

The county chairman of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee, C. C. Harvey, is requesting the full cooperation of Appomattox County farmers as ASC reporters commence the big job of measuring 1954 tobacco acreages.

"Getting tobacco acreage properly measured should be just as important to producers as it is to the Department of Agriculture," the chairman says. "For that reason producers should accept the responsibility of assisting ASC reporters in any way possible. Producers are responsible for showing all tobacco fields to the reporter. Failure to show a field may result in 100% reduction in farm tobacco allotment for next year."

Mr. Harvey estimated that there will be 800 tobacco farms to be measured in Appomattox County this year.
